

Spring salamander from unnamed brook - a ^{salamander #1} tributary to Twenty-mile stream. This one was in some kind of distress. It was curled up and sometimes belly-up. It stayed like this for weeks - alive but inactive. When put on land, it would re-enter the water, and again become immobile. It finally disappeared after a heavy rain.

G. porphyriticus

2004

Windsor

Cavendish